

Policy Deployment

Policy Deployment (Hoshin Kanri) is an organisation learning and competitive resource system. ‘Hoshin’ translates as direction and ‘Kanri’ as management. Policy Deployment forms the backbone of company’s like Toyota’s practice of profit management. Hoshin Kanri involves management at all levels through the innovative catchball process. Financial targets are carefully related to specific cost drivers and process improvements that ensure those targets will be met.

Our Policy Deployment workshops will help you create a cascading system to involve all levels of an organisation in strategic planning and support your Lean deployment. This workshop will provide people with a process that will help them align strategic goals, value streams, improvement activities and personal objectives with resources, responsibilities, actions and measures in a way that engages, motivates and involves everyone in achieving a transformation in the organisation.

We have assisted company’s in deploying strategy throughout the organisation.in manufacturing, engineering, pharmaceutical and service environments. Our clients have included visitscotland.com, 3M, Corus and many other firms. A key element of success is the ability to introduce a effective system to cascade strategy throughout the organisation.

What we give you is a deep understanding of the role of Policy Deployment in creating a sustainable method of creating profitable strategies through a system of organisational learning that links long-term and near-term strategies with improvement projects. The discipline of hoshin kanri helps an organization to: Focus on a shared goal, Communicate that goal to all leaders,Involve all leaders in planning to achieve the goal, Hold participants accountable for achieving their part of the plan. We have a growing experience to tailor the workshops directly to the needs of your organisation.
